The Nature

A long time ago, when I was about eight-years-old, and still living in Russia. My grandma would take me on nature walks and sometimes places we haven't been. I remember her taking me to zoos and parks. See the beauty of the animals, but some animals go extinct, because of the zoo's kidnapping the poor animals for the people to see. The zoo keepers lock them up in cages, and they just put them in front of everyone to look at them, and that sad, because animals don't deserve that. What if you were in their shoes? Would you like to be put in front of a crowd. Now let's think about nature park where nothing can go wrong, right? Wrong.

People go and walk around and they would eat there and not look around for a garbage can to trash their garbage, and some people who care about our ecosystem. They take their time and they pick up our garbage that we leave on the ground, littering is the number one problem in the whole world.

People don't see that they can ruin their own ecosystem and they have to live with that and their future could be ruin, it's kind of not being fair to nature, because nature gives us so much, like sunny days when we feel sad, rain when are sprinklers don't work, trees for us to make paper, houses, and oxygen, and flower and sunset to see the beautiful colors of nature.

Nature opened up my eyes, because my grandma made me go on those nature walks and I never been happier to see that and I hope this letter opens other people's eyes, because nature deserves to be treated the way we want to be treated, and how animals need to live forever because no one will babe us, and say "Don't do that".

Nature is beautiful and we live in it, and we need to take care of it.
